CURB STOCKS.

J. A. Minnear & Co., say today: Prices were firmer early and there were gains all through until the last hour when a little selling movement occurred. There was no activity at any time and the action of the market today would hardly effect its trend. There was a steady demand for South Lake and it looks like a good gamble. In the investment coppers, Utah Copper is especially attractive and if it should happen that the directors of this company should increase the dividend rate it will advance easily.

ADDITIONAL HOUGHTON SVIEGEL CASE TO JURY

LATE THIS AFTERNOON

PROSECUTION CONCLUDES TESTIMONY EARLY DURING THE MORNING SESSION.

L'Anse, May 25.—The case of George Svigel will be given to the jury in the Baraga county circuit court late this afternoon. The prosecution concluded its case early during the morning session and the defense will offer only a few witnesses.

The taking of testimony in the case of George Svigel, charged with assault with intent to murder, in having fired a revolver at Sheriff Cruise's automobile on the night of December 2, began this morning, a jury having been secured late Saturday afternoon. On the night in question, the prosecution maintains, several shots were fired at the automobile near South Range and Deputy Chelieu, one of the occupants, gave chase to a man near the scene, who later proved to be Svigel. The defendant still had a revolver in his hand and as he was the only man in the vicinity, it is believed he fired the shots.

The jury in the circuit court Saturday afternoon acquitted John Vallimaki of a charge of carrying concealed weapons. The defendant, it was alleged, carried a revolver during the so-called raid on the union headquarters at South Range on the morning of December 11, but when he was pursued by officers, the weapon was thrown away. The defense maintained that when Vallimaki carried the revolver, it was exposed, as he carried it in a holster.

EXCHANGE IN NEW QUARTERS.

Less Than Two Minutes Elapse in Cutting Over to New Office.

Less than two minutes, or to be exact, one minute and 47 seconds, were consumed in the cut-over from the old switchboard of the Michigan State Telephone company in the Ganette building to the company's new quarters in the Masonic building Saturday night and with the pulling of four sets of minute wires, the transfer was completed. This movement was the culmination of more than a year of work during which the company spent thousands of dollars in improvements to its outdoor plant and thousands more on the interior.

For the time there were in Houghton two fully equipped telephone exchanges. Both were connected with all the telephones served by the Houghton exchange. It remained only to throw one out and leave the other in control.

Al Morrell, the wire chief of the Houghton exchange, was in command at the old central. H. E. Harrington of Detroit, principal supervisor of the company, was in charge at the new. Mr. Harrington stood at a temporarily installed telephone attached to the rack in the new room. He called:

"Hello, Sam," to the man at Calumet in charge of the toll wires served by the Houghton exchange. "Hello, Charlie," he called to the official in charge of the operating room in the new exchange and then at 9:42 o'clock he called, "Pull away."

It would take a long and involved explanation to tell what that command "Pull away" set in motion. In effect it meant that four men in the old exchange and four men in the new exchange each pulled a set of strings and the old exchange went out of existence.

O. O. Johnson, in charge of the installation of the new exchange for the Western Electric company of Chicago, who has put in new exchanges in many cities, said that the "cut over" was accompanied by as little difficulty as he ever had experienced.

District Manager K. S. Baker, a Marquette man with an interesting specter and he reported that but four cases of "trouble" were reported in the few minutes elapsing before the exchange had settled down to business and was operating as smoothly as though it had been in existence for years.

BANKERS AND BROKERS.

Boston, Mass., May 25.—As a rule for past six months, Monday markets have been dull. The action today was no exception. About noon there was a fractional rally all through the New York list on the strength of a favorable decision in the Tap line case but the enthusiasm did not last long and market lapsed back into dullness. There was no change in the local coppers, trading being confined almost entirely to odd lots. Mass mining is still being picked up and we think it can be safely purchased for a point or two further rally.
